Agronomy Tip Sheet

As we turn the corner to fall it's time to think about forages for your animals this winter. Do you have enough hay? Looking at planting a winter annual forage may be a good option for grazing or baleage late fall or early spring. Planting oats in early September can provide forage for late fall, mix it with annual ryegrass and you will have forage for early spring. Triticale, wheat, or rye can also be planted throughout the fall to provide forage for grazing or hay in the spring. CFC can help you choose the right product or mix for your farm and your needs. We have lots of options or we can help you put together a custom seed mix that will work for you.
